ANÁLISIS ARTÍSTICO

Preparatory drawing for Caprice no. 47, A Gift to the Master

The sketch fot this engraving shows several differencias with respecto to the final result. In it, the master has features more characteristic of his status as a billy goat, while his foreleg is held by the witch with a bow who kneels; in the engraving this figure is holding out an offering to him in the form of a foetus. Between her hindquarters are udders which, in the print, have been replaced by another witch who is part of her retinue of acolytes.

The figure in the foreground maintains her prayerful pose in both cases, while the two in the background are barely distinguishable.

These differences indicate that what Goya had initially conceived as a tribute to a master becomes in the engraving an act in which an offering is being made to him.
